RE: ScanSoft, Inc. v. Voice Signal Technologies, Inc.

Dear Lisa:

I write in response to your letter of yesterday's date and to follow up on the voice mail message I left you last night. Your letter proposed an exchange of source code today. As I told you in my voice mail message, Voice Signal intends to file a motion for clarification of Magistrate Judge Alexander's Order, seeking to limit the source code to be produced by Voice Signal in connection with ScanSoft's patent claim to the user interface component. As you know, we have offered this to you by agreement, but you have not accepted our offer.

With respect to the discovery sought by ScanSoft in connection with its trade secret claims, we will be providing you with amended responses to ScanSoft's Interrogatories and Document Requests in light of Judge Saris' Order of January 26 denying Voice Signal's motion to dismiss those claims. I expect to get those responses to you next week.

You have also asked about VST's recently announced product for Samsung. Based on the press release you attached and my limited understanding of the product, I do not believe that there is anything not yet produced which relates to the '966 patent. However, I will confirm this understanding by talking with our clients. To the extent you seek information about the Samsung product in connection with ScanSoft's trade secrets claims, we will be providing you with amended responses to your document requests early next week. You can rest assured that our amendment will include any supplementation necessary as a result of new developments since the date of our initial responses.
